

The International Academy of Osteopathy – (IAO Belgium)

The International Academy of Osteopathy (IAO-Belgium) is a college established 1987 and employs a staff of 146. It offers its training and education in 21 cities located in 6 European countries (Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Netherlands and Denmark), and has over 2,100 students in training. The IAO's goal is to form its students into safe, independent, and complete osteopathic practitioners. The IAO-Belgium offers a modern course and curriculum with the highest possible academic standards. The high level of education enables its graduates to provide all patients with the best quality osteopathic treatment available. The IAO-Belgium promotes academic standards in osteopathic training, as well as recognition of academically trained osteopaths in all European countries in which it teaches, and interdisciplinary cooperation with the medical professions is of the utmost importance.

The IAO-Belgium believes that instead of looking at the surface of a country to determine its importance in the osteopathy world, it's more important to focus on the number of osteopaths that are working in a specific country and how they were trained.
